THE address delivered by M. RICHAUD at the opening of the Session of the Colonia Council at Saigon the other day supplies an instructive resume of the position of affairs in the French possessions in Indo-Ohina. For outsiders the most interesting point in the address i the reference to the disastrous experiment in protection which has been made It is not often that the example of the illeffects of protection are so clearly exemplified as they have been in Cochin-China. The industry protected was not local, but, industrially speaking, foreign, i.e., French. France, having acquired the colony, followed the example set by England in her Eastern colonies, and constituted Saigon a free port Under this régime of freedom commerce rapidly advanced, and the colony became av important market for European goods. The kong at eight o'clock on Saturday morning. market having been thus established, the French manufacturers desired to secure monopoly of it for thomselves, and the general tariff of France was imposed. The result was what might have been expected. Trade rapidly declined, and a cry was soon raised for a reversal of the ill-advised policy. The Chamber of Commerce has asked for the total abrogation of the tariff; the hope held out by M. RICHAUD is confined to its modification; the general tariff may be repealed, but differential duties will still be imposed on goods which can be produced in France, Asiatio goods and articles not produced in France being admitted free. The unfairness of this policy to the colony is at once apparent. If protection can be justified at all it ought to be adopted in reference to local industries. Most of the articles imported by Cochin-China from China and other Asiatic countries are produced to a greater or less extent within the colony, and by protection certain industries might no doubt be promoted, but of course under the usual penalty of damage to the prosperity of the country as a whole. To tax the people for the benefit of the manufacturerin France, to virtually extort tribute from them for the benefit of a class that has in no way contributed to the build- sharp. The following team will represent the ing up of the colony, is a very different and wholly indefensible proceeding. This, however, is the policy indicated by M. RICHAUD. a portion of whose speech we reproduce in another column.

Concurrently with the decline in its trade caused by the imposition crushing customs dues, Saigon bas been called upon to contribute an annual sum of eleven million france to the expenses of governing Tonquin. As the two countries have now been united under one Government this is perhaps not unreasonable. Tonquin was not acquired entirely for its own sake, but as an accessory to Cochin-China. and the latter might, if it had been in a position, have been called upon to contribute the whole of the cost, just as the cost of the acafford the whole cost, the subsidy of even the eleven million france having thrown her strainers had been dug out and chopped finances into disorder. M. RICHAUD says :- with pick-axes and the articles abstracted bodily. "Our financial situation, without this subvention, would be very satisfactory, and, not. Wanchai Gap Road. The richest agricultural countries, if the incomes derived from their products are not spent in those countries, are inevitably condemned to misery, as witness the case of Ireland, which, notwithstanding the fertility of its soil, supports only a miserable, population, because the landlords spend in London or on the Continent the rents of their the Secretary of State for War, in reply, said of a far more serious kind than we have yet demanded of us represents a third of our motion was rejected by 42 votes.

budget, and, one may say, eats up all our sayings," M. RICHAUD therefore recommends the floating of a Tonquin loan of one_hundred million france, to meet the initial expenses of the establishment of the Government and for the opening up of means of communica tion and the execution of public works, the interest and sinking fund being guaranteed by Cochin-China, The annual expense of the loan until its termination would be five or six million france, and it is anticipated that has been thoroughly revised and brought up Tonquin, requiring in the meantime no farther subvention, will, in a few years, beable to bear part of the interest charge. The Governor General is a firm believer in the future of Tonquin. In the interior of the country republic. there are vast tracts of fertile land, lying waste, owing to the disturbed state of the country before it was brought under French rule, and a considerable development of agriculture may now be looked for. But it is to its mineral wealth that M. BIOHAUD chiefly looks as the source of the future presperity of the country. Already, he says, the Coal Mining Company has commenced work, and it is expected that in two months it will be able to place the outturn of its mines on the market. The concessionary of the silver mines at Cac-bang will commence work before the war worked by Chinese and natives, and, although very primitive methods 124 were employed, gave good results. Many Lastly, says M. Richaud, the valley of the Bed River is the shortest route by which to reach Yunnan and Kwangsi, and offers a source of immense profits on the transit trade. The route is, no doubt, a valuable All letters for publication should be written on one one, but it has been sufficiently proved, we think, that its value has been considerably over-rated, as, although short, it is not very practicable, and it serves only a limited section of the two provinces tained. It is however, not a matter to be everlooked in estimating the elements of progress i Tonquin, and we do not think M. RICHAUD'S forecast of a prosperous future for the country overcoloured, provided that a consistent policy be substituted for the hitherto frequent changes which have taker place not only in the personnel but the methods of government. List year a regular budget for Tonquin was made up for the

"THE SHAUGHRAUN" AT THE THEATRE ROYAL.

Notwithstanding the counter attractions Chiarini's Circus and the Musical Club's concer there was a very good house at the Theatre Royal on Saturday night to witness the production of Dion Boucicault's great drama " The Shaughraun" by Mr. Willard's Company. The piece is one that makes heavy demands on the powers of any cast, but taking Saturday night's performance as a whole the Com pany may be congratulated on having scored another success. Of course the general effect of shortly. The piece contains humour and pathos so cleverly mingled that it never fails to "take" among an audience where all tastes are represented, and though the pathetic parts had been in one or two instances somewhat curtailed there was still sufficient remaining to give the members of the Company who are pre-eminently exponents of this lines. plenty of opportunity of scoring. The piece went on the whole pretty smoothly, although hitches were now and again undoubtedly present, while contrary to the general rule the third act was decidedly the weakest of the three. Another little fault must also be pointed out, and that is that the scene-shifters while setting a scene while another was being played, did their part so boisterously as to several times make themselves audible for above the performers who were visible. The number of scenes in the piece and the desire to avoid long waits undoubtedly caused a great deal hurry behind the scenes, added to which the regular stage manager had a big part to fill, bu even though this may be some excuse, the defect complained of was painfully apparent more than

The large growd of people who attended amused themselves, previous o the commencement of the show, by feeding up the elephants with biscuits, prodding the panthers, gazing wonderingly at the liens, and annoying only difference perhaps being that the terrific rearing and bellowing that these noble, animals are generally trained to after such treatment was wanting. The kings of the forest departed so far out of the ordinary that they, with that supreme indifference becoming to kings of any class, showed their disgust at the whole affair by enjoying gentle sleep for nearly the whole of the time. People's feel ings do not certainly run in the same groove but why a lady should have made the following remark we are unable to say—" ()h, what a levely face that lion has, and look at those beautifu elephants, but those herried monkeys-Ugh!"

The band of "Manilians" (see programme) discoursed music, throughout the evening and opended the proceedings with an overture, regotiated with a great deal of noise and some little harmony. However, for a circus band their efforts were very passable. The Sports of Apollo put every body into a good humour. being clever and graceful in the extreme. Misses Le Blonde Harmston, Victoria Blanche, Jennio, Comly, Rolland and Mr. W. B. Harmston were the performers. The whole thing, merely a pantom imic show, brought out very clearly the power that the performers had over their horses. The Japanese Kawamura and Chojiro performed some very clover feats with the magnetic barrels, their dexterous handling, or rather footing, or the tubs being loudly applanded.

Signor Chiarini met with a very flattering reception on his entrance into the ring with the pony Midget, a very clever little animal, well up the various tricks it performed, although the interest of the audience was not much excite by the item, the trained pany being a part and parcel of nearly every circus on earth. Jennie in her refined act of equestrianism was a great success, and performed her various difficult feats, on the padded horse in a very clover manner. while her hoop jumping was negotiated in a way that fairly brought down the house. Mille. Le Blonde Harmston and Mr. George Harmston were next billed for an "Equestrian Vision upon two bare-backed horses," an exhibition that stamped both performers as extremely elever artists, the lady in her during postures and quick change of position giving an excellent account of herself. The next item, one of the most interesting in an interesting programme, was an exhibition of plain saddle riding and jumping, by Miss Victoria Blanche. This lady's capabilities are already known in Hongkong, and it is needless to say that her exposition of the "most difficult, most easy, and most beautiful" accomplishment in the world was a rare treat, while she took her fences in a clean, easy way that fairly stormed the house. Afteranintarvaloffifteen minutes the whole of the male portion of the Company filled in fifteen minutes with some extraordinarily smart tumyounger members of the troups were exceptionally good in this line, and well deserved the applanse they received. Mr. Abadie, with his two trained Caylon elephants, next claimed attention. The elephants, which went through all their tricks in a very thorough manner are growing fast. THE GOVERNUR-GENERAL OF FRENCH INDO-CHINA ON PROTECTION.

We translate the following extract from the speech of M. Richard, Governor-General of French Indo-China, at the opening of the session of the Colonial Council at Saigon :--You are aware that I have applied to the Minister for, and have secured, a revision of the tarif général and that goods which are not produced in France should be admitted duty free. From the time when this comes into operation we may have a diminution in the customs receipts, but as our trade will benefit this loss will be made up from other sources. The customs régime aud the tarif général have been in operation importance whatever. The only one that seems in the Colony little more than a year. It is our to be of some interest is the report that the duty to consider coolly the origin of the Customs | work in the palace connected with the construcquences which have followed, and those which ing, seven hundred coolies being kept at work may be expected or doubted, from the double day after day. point of view of colonial interests and those of the metropolis. Until 1884 the opponents of the protective system easily carried their point; our resources, steadily developing, amply sufficed for our needs and allowed of the creation of a rein reality a free port. All the efforts of the trade gave rise to a law constituting Saigon colony had been directed to this result, when the mother country demanded the establishment of customs dues. The only deviation from the freedom of the port had been the placing of an export duty on rice; but this tax, counterbalanced by an abatement in the land tax. was relatively small, and its collection was particularly easy. At this time (1884) the home Government became more pressing; it repre sented that French industry saw foreign markets being closed to it by the protective tariffs established by nearly all the European nations, and that it was of importance to preserve the national markets, even at the cost of some sacri fice. An appeal was made to the patriotism of the colony, and the appeal was answered. The Colonial Council and Chamber of Commerce accepted in principle the establishment of dues. The special tariff ed by the Government was voted by the local assembly on the 15th October, 1834; this tariff was to be applicable to the whole of Indo-Chins. Nothing was done, however, either in 881 or 1886, and the matter appeared to have been forgotten. In 1837 the Chamber; again taking up the question, voted, without any study it must be understood, the application to Indo-China of the tarif général of France with a few modifications to be determined by decree. new tariff was applied in Tonquin from the 1s of the same year that the present customs regime was really in operation throughout the whole the eastern gate accidentally capsized, hurling Indo-China. Imports immediately fell to an alarming extent, but this could secounted for by the large stocks which merchants had scommulated in their godowns, six months' notice having been given. When, however, these stocks became exhausted it was imports and only an insignificant augmentation in French imports. There was a constant lack of inward cargo for the vessels that had frequented our port previously, the cause of which has had a disastrous influence on our export trade. Was Saigon, already handicapped by its position 60 miles in the interior, to renounce its aim to make for itself a place as a port of exchange and entrepot between its two powerful neighbours, Hongkong and Singspore? Numerons protests were made. As soon as I arrived in the colony I represented to the department the well founded complaints of the Chamber of Commerce and of the native population, first in a report of the 9th June, 1888, and then in a pressing, dated 16th September. Upon the receipt of the latter the Minister asked me, by telegraphic despatch, for a draft tariff exempting goods not produced in France and which, in fact, constituted the bulk of the trade between Cochin-China and the neighbouring countries. This draft was despatched on the 2nd November. That is the first step towards a return to the previous state of things. But the action of the department was not limited to what I have stated. Before receiving my last report, and in reply to the empose of the situaion I had written on the 9th June, the Minis ter instructed me to undertake immediately the revision of the tarif general I communicated with the Chambers of Commerce of Cochin-China and of Tonquin, and the work will proceed at once. I have informed the minister how ill-adapted the turif weneral is to our economic conditions. Minutely elaborated to meet the requirements of a complicated trade, of perfected acriculture, and of scientifically conducted industry, this tariff, applied to our primitive. little varied, and low value articles of consumption, created difficulties by its very perfection and scientific precision. It is in its minute classification that the reason of the perpetual lisputes between the customs service and the Chinese merchants must be sought. Our agents, tied down by the strict letter of the law, are not always able to avoid difficulties, while on the other hand the Chinese complain bitterly of the contrast with the facilities they enjoy in the neighbouring ports and throw on us the responsibility. classifications will be few and simple. I also ob served that the first consequence of the application of the home tariff pure and simple was to defeat the end of the new institution, which instead of protecting our national industry. out of proportion to the sacrifice, and I insisted on the feeble impetus given to the trade in Fronch goods by protection, a result which does sent, and thus obviate heavy loss and calamity. not give a return for the four millions of taxation which the new regime imposes on the colony. We ought not to forget, however, that he customs have only been in operation sim yesterday, so to speak, and to deny the officacy the welfare of his subjects. His contribution of the protection accorded to the products of five hundred taels towards the fund for the of the national industry on an experience hardly commenced would be imprudent. To hope that the argument founded on the during the winter months is highly appreciated. small result obtained will bring us back free trade would be. I fear, an illusion. The general tendency of Parliament at the present time is protectionist, and the great sacrifices which have been made for the extension of our colonial empire are too recent not to be invoked against us. What we can and ought to obtain is that Parliament, better informed as to our economic circumstances, will give to the oustoms regime only an essentially protective character. This reform once thoroughly effected, the national industry must become, by initiative the use of firearms. Every one connected with force and persevering efforts, mistress of the market. On this point it must be remembered that everything, or nearly everything, remains to be done. In 1887 our manufacturers were not prepared to supply the Indo-China markets. SUMMARY OF THE

"KWANG-PAO."

The Kwang-pao of to-day (7th December), instead of a leading article, collects a large number of Peking news, most of which are of ne

Besides the hundreds of lanterns sent to Pe king for the occasion of His Majesty's ma riage, 100 lacquered tables reached the capital a short while back.

successfully carried away Two men meeting in the street, instead of saluting or greeting each other in the usual way, make use of strong language, each accusing the other of being a bad character and a thief. These two were, however, pounced upon, and are now locked up in a Chinese prison, where, no doubt, their relations will improve.

A rich man's son, while seated in a tox shop in Canton, is assailed by a band of rowdies and carried away. He is now held a prisoner, and a ansom of taels 10,000 is demanded for his January to 21st February, 1889). A story is told of four girls among whom existed a warm friendship. A short while back me of them was ruthlessly snatched away by death, and one of the survivors not long after committed spicide. Every one is now agreed that the spirit of the friend who died first, too timid to cross the waters of the Styr alone. brought about the death of her friend, so that her spirit may escort and befriend her.

The punishment is told of a lover, who, while his lady love was slive, heartlessly subjected her to every harsh treatment. Her spirit haunts him continuously. His state of mind is one of borongh unhappiness.

The Pun-yu Magistrate, short of funds, it is presumed, or not satisfied with the squeeze destate of things was to be found in the application rived from private pawnshops, is putting on the screw with a vengeance, threatening to close all unlicensed shops unless, of course, some heavy bribe is forthcoming; that goes without saying. A poor watchman, while in the execution of his duties, is carried away by some young man who are prowling the streets after a "jambonree." The presence of mind is extelled of a small monkey kept by a man in Shao-chow. The man never parted company from his pet, and even in his night orgies the monkey would sit by his side. The opium smoker, after consuming as much oping as was sufficient to make him insensible to everything that was going on around, drops his pipe and falls fast asleep. The ashes from the pipe set fire to the curtain, and the menkey, perceiving the finme, takes hold of the teapot and extinguishes the incipient fire. Then follow extracts from the Pelcing Gazette and from foreign papers:

The leading article of the Kwangpao of the 8th instant consists of a petition presented by s Hain ta'ai of Ch'ang Lo, in Fuhkien, proposing the establishment of a kind of board to co-operate with the gentry in eradicating evil habits prevalent among the people. The writer, after showing that the gentry are better suited to deal with matters concerning the people, as they are better acquainted with the various classes of Chinese communities, enumerates theevils that should be exterminated. Fighting among claus is given the chief place. Then follow gambling, opium smoking, dishonest practices, secret pettifogging, &c. The graduate suggests, with a good deal of reason; that the lower classes and villagers should pay the Government taxes through this board in order to give no chance to the runners and low officials to extert money and We will obtain, I hope, a tariff in which the to squeeze. He then speaks against capital ounishment, which, in his opinion, should not be extended to pilferers and petty thieves, and concludes by also recommending that this board should furthermore be entrusted with the purbecame simply fiscal. The results obtained are chase of fire engines, with a view to extinguish the fires in a more rapid manner than at pre-
